REPORT ON PARA LEGAL VOLUNTEERING AND ITS ACTIVITIES

The students of our college who have been appointed as Paralegal Volunteers or PLV's by the District Legal Service Authority of Dakshina Kannada through an interview conducted from DLSA (District Legal Services Authority) were trained with orientation program. Later they have been assigned with a survey that was conducted in District Prison, Mangalore to conduct a survey by dividing them into two teams accompanied with two advocates from DLSA involving the questions such as:

- Whether the accused were applied for bail or not?
- If not to secure the reasons for the same.

After interacting with around 360 accused's over 5 days, a report of the survey has been submitted to the District Legal Services Authority (DLSA) and report was helpful for the DLSA to provide legal aid to the under trials.

Students were also assigned to conduct the survey on number of cases to be disposed of in Lok Adalat through National Legal service Authority (NALSA) app which provided valuable statistical inputs to the NALSA.

Date: 29.07.2024

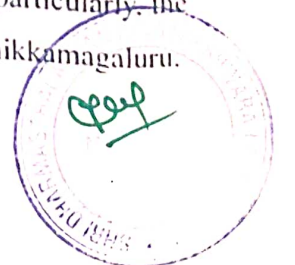

SUB: REPRESENTATION PRAYING FOR SUO MOTO COGNIZANCE OF UNSCIENTIFIC/ UNMONITORED AND INDISCRIMINATE HILL-LOCK CUTTING IN THE REGIONS OF THE WESTERN GHATS CAUSING MASSIVE LANDSLIDES.

Respected Sir,

We, the undersigned, are residents of Bhatkal Taluk in Uttara Kannada District and Karkala Taluk in Udupi District studying law in the final year of Shree Dharamshala Manjunatheshwara Law School, Mangalore, write to you with deep concern regarding the escalating issue of landslides in the ecologically sensitive Western Ghats, particularly in Karnataka, exacerbated by irresponsible human activities such as vertical cutting of hill slopes and indiscriminate felling of trees. As a resident of Dakshina Kannada, who is well versed with the said areas and a concerned student, deeply committed to environmental conservation, I urge the National Green Tribunal to take immediate and decisive action to protect this UNESCO World Heritage site and its invaluable biodiversity.

TOPOGRAPHY OF THE REGION, WHAT MAKES IT UNIQUE?

We have restricted our scope to the Western Ghat located in Karnataka, more particularly, the districts of Dakshina Kannada, Kodagu (Coorg), Udupi, Uttara Kannada and Chikkamagaluru.

This region boasts fascinatingly fragile topography and abundantly diverse flora and fauna. The division and surrounding districts have a tropical monsoon climate with coastal plains, hills and beaches.

- Dakshin Kannada: It is a mineral rich area, the soil is mostly lateritic type, characterised by high iron and aluminium content. The Geological Survey of India has identified this district as a moderately earthquake-prone region and categorised it in the Seismic III Zone.
- Kodagu (Coorg) is known for its dense forest cover and the exotic flora and fauna found there. It has three wildlife sanctuaries; Pushpagiri Wildlife Sanctuary, Talakaveri Wildlife Sanctuary and Brahmagiri Wildlife Sanctuary, one National Park; the Nagarahole National Park and the only private sanctuary of India; the SAI Sanctuary. Kodagu is home for species endemic to the Western Ghats. It has large tiger and elephant populations as well.
- Udupi: An interesting feature of the coastal strip and the middle belt is that, it is not a plain but a series of estuarine low lands separated by numerous hill ranges. The district is characterized by sandy soil along the coastal belt and lateritic soil in other parts with high iron and aluminum contents. There is rich deposit of alluvial soil in the valleys and ravine bases.
- Uttar Kannada: It has a unique coastal climate. Behind the coastal plain are flat-topped hills from 60 to 100 meters in height, and behind the hills are the ridges and peaks of the Sahyadris. The district's high rainfall supports lush forests, which cover approximately 70% of the district. The forest is home to a diverse range of species of animals including black panthers and leopard cat.
- Chikkamagaluru: Chandradrona Mountain Range of the Western Ghats is in the Chikkamagaluru district of Karnataka, it boasts the highest peak in the state. It has a height of 1,930 metres (6,398 ft.). Chikkamagaluru district features lush coffee plantations which attracts several tourists in these hill stations.

The abovementioned diversity reflect why the Western Ghats were included in the UNESCO World Heritage site. According to UNESCO, the Western Ghats has mountain and hill range.

much older than Himalayas, thousands of IUCN listed endangered species of flora and fauna and overall great biodiversity.

LANDSLIDES IN THE WESTERN GHATS DUE TO VERTICAL HILL-LOCK CUTTING

Historically, landslides in the Western Ghats were sporadic and less severe compared to recent decades. According to Landslide Atlas by ISRO, it is one of the most susceptible area for landslides the entirety of Western Ghats

https://www.msc.gov.in/sites/default/files/pdf/Announcements/Landslides_Atlas_of_India_Udated_25Aug2023.pdf (Annexure 1) @ Page 9-10

The topography of the area is such that each hillock is connected to the other and experts say that heavy rain is the norm in the Malnad region. The average rainfall in this region averages 100 cm (39 in) to 900 cm (350 in), with an average rainfall of 250 cm (98 in). Despite the said being the case, people have been cutting hillocks, unscientifically and in an unregulated manner for various commercial and agricultural purposes such as establishing resorts and commercial buildings, cultivation, et cetera. Further, in order to increase connectivity to such establishment, hillocks are also cut in order to construct roads. Such indiscriminate cutting of land can be seen on government as well as private land. The hillocks when cut, cause the hills to lose their support from the side and bottom, as a result, become prone to landslides during the monsoon season. Such loose soil also affect and divert the natural flow of water and also result in the loss of the natural green cover. It is important to note that the cutting of hillocks in these regions are unregulated. There is no mechanism or authority under which they are monitored or regulated. Neither the environmental authorities nor forest authorities nor revenue authorities look or keep a track of any of the aspects of hill-lock cutting.

It may also be noted that no authority conducts any sort of scientific study or environmental impact assessment prior to cutting of such hill-locks and such hills are cut at the whims and fancies of the owners of the land. The absence of scientific study, inadequate environmental impact assessments (EIAs) and ineffective land use policies aggravate the vulnerability of hill slopes to landslides. The failure on the part of the authorities to take any action and the lack of stringent regulations and enforcement further aggravates the situation which results in massive landslides during the monsoon season.

Following the infamous Coorg landslide of 2018, the Geological Survey of India published a reports citing the primary reason of the landslide. It said "High angle slope cut for road construction, rapid slope modification for construction of houses, hotels, home-stays and large scale slope modification for coffee plantation are very common. These slope modifications actually decrease slope stability and later with the high rainwater percolation the slopes become unstable and prone to failure."

IMPACT OF LANDSLIDES

The Western Ghats, as stated earlier is designated as a UNESCO World Heritage site and represents one of the world's biodiversity hotspots. This region is home to diverse ecosystems, endemic species, and plays a crucial role in regulating climate and water resources. However, the fragile ecological balance of the Western Ghats is increasingly under threat due to human interventions, particularly those leading to landslides. The impact/consequences of landslides in the western ghats are as follows:

1. Loss of Human Life: The sudden, erratic and recurring landslides during monsoon season affect the lives and livelihoods of the people residing and commuting in and around the Western Ghats. Due to such vertical hill-lock cutting local resident oblivious to the changed topographic conditions around their localities end up getting trapped under the loose errored soil and end up losing their lives.
2. Loss of Biodiversity: The Western Ghats harbour a vast array of flora and fauna, many of which are endemic and endangered. Landslides destroy habitats, fragment ecosystems, and threaten the survival of these species. District of Kodagu which has IUCN listed endangered species of flora and fauna in National Parks and Sanctuaries are facing the wrath of deforestation and landslides.
3. Soil Erosion and Degradation: Vertical cutting of hill slopes and deforestation weaken the natural stability of soils. This degradation leads to increased soil erosion, loss of fertile topsoil, and reduced agricultural productivity downstream.
4. Water Resource Impacts: The Western Ghats act as a crucial watershed, supplying to major rivers and reservoirs in peninsular India. Landslides can alter natural drainage patterns, leading to sedimentation of water bodies, affecting water quality, and reducing water availability.

5. Climate Change Vulnerability: Intact forests in the Western Ghats play a pivotal role in carbon sequestration and climate regulation. Deforestation and landslides contribute to carbon emissions, exacerbating global climate change impacts.

SUBSTANTIATING EVIDENCE

To substantiate the abovementioned claims, we have gathered a comprehensive array of new articles and reports:

1. An investigative article The Probe discussing the role of human activities in increasing landslide occurrences in ecologically sensitive zones like the Western Ghats. It highlights how the Western Ghats, the ecological hotspot is endangered due to human intervention and commercial greed.

REASON FOR THE PRESENT REPRESENTATION

Despite repeated requests to the state and district administrations of Karnataka regarding the urgency of addressing landslide risks and implementing preventive measures, little to no action has been taken. Requests for stricter enforcement of environmental regulations, sustainable land use practices, and preservation of forest cover have largely been disregarded. The inaction of local authorities has exacerbated the vulnerability of the Western Ghats to environmental disasters such as landslides.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR IMMEDIATE ACTION

Given the gravity of the situation and the urgency to protect the Western Ghats, we respectfully urge the National Green Tribunal to consider the following recommendations:

1. Ban on Earth Movers in Ecologically Sensitive Areas: Consider a directive to ban the use of heavy earth-moving machinery in ecologically sensitive zones of the Western Ghats, similar to measures adopted in certain north-eastern states of India. This restriction would help minimize soil disturbance and mitigate landslide risks.
2. Stop work direction: Issue a direction to stop any ongoing work of hill-lock cutting and restrict any future work which alters the basic structure of the hill in the Western Ghats until proper guidelines and regulations are in place to protect the Western Ghats.
3. Direction for Scientific Study or Environmental Impact assessment: Issue directions to obtain scientific study certificates or Environmental Impact Assessment reports prior to continuing any ongoing work and/or starting any new developmental project.
4. Directive for Stricter Regulations: Issue directives for stringent regulations on hill cutting, deforestation, and land use practices in ecologically sensitive zones like the Western Ghats. Enforce regular monitoring and impose severe penalties for violations.
5. Promotion of Sustainable Development Practices: Encourage the adoption of sustainable development practices that prioritize environmental conservation and biodiversity protection. This includes promoting eco-friendly infrastructure development and implementing reforestation initiatives.
6. Public Awareness and Education: Launch comprehensive awareness campaigns to educate local communities, policymakers, and stakeholders about the environmental impacts of their actions and the importance of preserving natural ecosystems.
7. Investment in Research and Monitoring: Allocate resources for research and monitoring programs aimed at understanding landslide dynamics, ecosystem resilience, and climate change impacts in the Western Ghats.

PRAYER

The protection and conservation of the Western Ghats are imperative not only for biodiversity conservation but also for ensuring sustainable development and the well-being of millions of people dependent on its ecosystem services. Immediate intervention is essential to reverse the trends of environmental degradation and prevent irreversible damage to this globally significant ecological hotspot. Hence, it is prayed that this Hon'ble Tribunal be pleased to take immediate and suitable steps for banning of cutting of hillocks by the use of earth movers or through any other means until a proper mechanism/system with checks and balances is established by the concerned authorities.

We trust that the National Green Tribunal, with its mandate to uphold environmental justice and integrity, will take immediate proactive measures to address the root causes of landslides in the Western Ghats. By doing so, we can safeguard this UNESCO World Heritage site for future generations and uphold our commitment to environmental stewardship.

Thank you for considering this urgent matter.

Landslides in Kodagu & Western Ghats: A critique of GSI report

August 8, 2020August 8, 2020 · SANDRP

Guest Article by Prof Mysooru R. Yadupathi Putty

Introduction This write-up is with regard to the news-paper reports on the “The Geological Survey of India (GSI) Report on the landslides in Kodagu”. This is based on the information furnished by the news-papers and by the scanned copies of the original report of the GSI. The report attributes the landslides to excessive rainfall and extensive slope modifications due to anthropogenic activities and puts blame on the people who have been using the land to their benefit. This brief article is written in order to bring it to the notice of the authorities concerned, and the people in general, that some of the variations of the GSI are highly ill-conceived, mutually contradictory and technically un-

Kodagu (Karnataka's 'Male-naadu', in general) responsible for pulling the wrath of the Nature on to themselves. The author of this critique is a Hydrologist, who has been working in the region on Runoff processes, Land-use and Soils for nearly three decades. The following is a review of the available material of the report, point by point.

Plate 1- Landslides in Kodagu have not been rock falls, but are rather a mass sliding of soil mantles

Recent landslides – What are They Due to?

Citing reasons for the landslides on 16th and 17th August 2018, the GSI writes as below:

“High angle slope cut for road construction, rapid slope modification for construction of houses, hotels, home-stays and large scale slope modification for coffee plantation are very common. These slope modifications actually decrease slope stability and later with the high rainwater percolation the slopes become unstable and prone to failure.

“Due to slope modifications natural drainage has been blocked. But, during high water precipitation in Monsoon, huge volume of water flowed from upslope towards downslope But as water volume kept on increasing, the water pressure on the surface got so intense that it could not hold water resulting in slope failure”

The GSI goes ahead to suggest long-term measures to prevent landslides as this:

“Construction of drainage system on slope to reduce the pore pressure, construction of retaining walls, stone pitching and gabions, biotechnical measures of slope protection and modification of slope by grading and benching. “ Plantations like Vetiver grass may be planted which is the best means to improve the slope stability conditions.”

Supposedly, the GSI suggests measures to reduce surface flow and increase infiltration through land management practices. On the other hand, the report explains yet another cause for landslides thus:

"Another reason is the creation of water tanks and ponds built in estates , some are created even on higher slopes modifying the actual slope. During the heavy rainfall, all these got overflowed. There are also high possibilities of seepage from within the tanks directly within the slope. This water along with rain water will increase the pore water pressure of the slope and decrease the internal friction of the slope forming material which ultimately lead to the slope failure."

Obviously, the above few observations contradict each other and are misleading. One fails to understand whether the agency recommends measures to increase seepage (infiltration) and thus reduce overland flow or vice-versa! In the recent decades, the Country has been witness to a revolution that has promoted rainwater harvesting and watershed development in a big-way. This revolution has swept through the Male-naadu areas also – creation of new tanks, afforestation (with exotic species) of slopes that probably had never seen even a small tree growing on them, implementation of land management practices even on pristine grassed slopes, etc. have battered the Western Ghats no end. All these measures have been taken up just to increase infiltration, and now the GSI blames the people for increasing seepage by artificial means!!

Plate 2- Mass sliding occurs mostly in the valley portions

Where Do Landslides Occur?

Describing where landslides occur, GSI writes:

“the causative factors for these landslide incidences are mainly anthropogenic i.e. destabilisation of slopes by removal of toe, lack of proper drainage at toe part and on the slopes causing seepage of water into the weaker planes like joints and fracture. The triggering factor for slides in the study area is mainly rainfall which has contributed to increase in the pore pressure of the weathered rock mass resulting in reduction of shear strength and subsequent failure.

“Most of the slides of the area are occurring in in-situ soil/ Laterite/ weathered rock as overburden on slope.

“Most of the slides were recorded on modified slope along road sections”.

The report quotes many previous studies and mentions remedial measures thus:

“Realignment of the road, construction of retaining wall with back filling and stone pitching for the downslope at 1:1 angle, removal of slide debris and arresting infiltration of water at the top with proper concrete lined drainage was recommended.

“Removal of overburden material, slope benching, proper lined drainage at the top as well as the toe

"The design of the retaining structure should be made as per standards keeping in view the strength parameter of the rocks (granite gneiss) in the area. Weep holes are to be provided to retaining structures with suitable graded filters".

It is learn that the GSI team visited 85 of the 105 sites that experienced landslides. It is surprising and shocking that the team of experts failed to understand the very simple truth that these landslides in Kodagu have not been rock falls, but are rather a mass sliding of soil mantles, which are extraordinary thick in this region (Borugeon, 1989). The soils formed on site here are more than 20 m thick on most slopes and are thicker than 50 m in some places (Darshan, 2016). Hence, Joints and Fractures in rocks play absolutely no role in these landslides. It is also a pity the team failed to notice that mass sliding has occurred mostly in the valley portions (Plate 2) and that many vertical cuttings away from the valley have sustained (Plate 3).

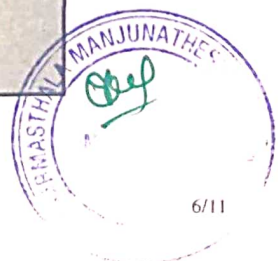

Plate 3- Many vertical cuttings away from the valley have sustained

This author is sad that the GSI delves not even a bit on the soils and their characteristics in the region. The fact is that the Western Ghat slopes are highly stable (Putty and Madhusoodhanan, 2013), since over the whole of the region hardly 20% of the rainfall flows over-land and on the forest floors, the complete amount of rainfall infiltrates in to the ground (Putty, Swamy and Prasad, 1997). The so infiltrating water flows into the streams through subsurface pathways. This subsurface flow, while reaching the streams in the valleys saturates large masses of soil in the vicinity of the stream. Hence, the valley portions are always prone to sliding, and exceptionally heavy and continuous rains lead to disastrous sliding. The rain gauge being maintained by the 'Water Resource Centre' of the National Institute of Engg., Mysuru, at a place near the areas of massive sliding, has recorded 320 mm, 461 mm and 394 mm of rainfall on the 14th, 16th and 17th respectively, while the previous 5-day rainfall had been 880 mm. This extremely heavy rainfall has led to unprecedented subsurface water storage and the obvious has happened. It may be noted that slope protection works of no sort would prevent slides of this order in the valleys. As has been the experience of the Indian Railways, landslides in the valleys only wash away all sorts of protection works and the only way to prevent frequent occurrences of slides would be to totally avoid tall cuttings near the valley portions.

Hydrology of the Western Ghats

Little is known to the common man of the hydrological processes and soils in Male-naadu. Even experts, who are familiar only with regions that experience much less rainfall and are underlain by only sedimentary rocks, fail to understand the situation in Kodagu. A couple of examples can be mentioned. Dr. Balasubramanian (an expert, who has guided many students to the Kodagu landslips), whom 'The Hindu' interviewed in the wake of the Kodagu disaster has been quoted to have said so:

".... based on the output, an area can be classified under the high-risk or the low-risk category for landslips. Normally such a study is done along railway tracks but not in an urban environment. But it is a must for a hilly terrain like Kodagu especially in areas where the thickness of soil is in excess of 1.5 metres. Soil thickness in excess of 1.5 metres always has an element of uncertainty".

But, here in the Western Ghats, the soils are thicker ten times that! The team from IEI, Mysuru, is reported to have written so: "implementation of the Kasturi Rangan panel report would have prevented the disaster". One should not even dream of any effect on landslides due to implementation of any measure for just a couple of feet deep at the surface. This is so since soils in the region have formed over millions of years and the slides have occurred meters deep in soils. Be that, however, it is a sad state of affairs that a high level committee appointed for the purpose ignores the hydrological processes that actually prevail in the region, while preparing an 'authentic report'.

At yet another point, the GSI team writes:

"Clean water flow in force from inside the slope: It was observed that considerable volume of very clean water was coming out from the middle parts of the landslides. These may be caused due to high amount water flux in aquifers.....

"Another probability may be the water percolated inside the rock joints in one place and travelled through the joint planes before coming out at some other places. Whatever might the reason be, this continuous flow of the water in force inside the slope will decrease the stability of the slope and eventually will act as a triggering factor for slope failure".

Plate 7 Underground conduits ('Gupta Gaminies') of very large size are often encountered in the very thick soil mantle of the forested slopes.

ಭಾಯಾಚತ್ರ 7 ಅರಣ್ಯಾವೃತ ಇಳಿಜಾರಿನಲ್ಲಿ ಮಣ್ಣಿನ ಪದರ ವಿಪರೀತ ದಪ್ಪವಾಗಿರುತ್ತದೆ. ಮಣ್ಣಿನ ಅಳದಲ್ಲಿ ಕುಳಿತು

Plate 4- Preferential subsurface pathways like pipes can be likened to Gupta Gaminies – these are photographs taken in early 90s in Talakaveri (from Putty, 1994)

This confirms the total ignorance of the GSI team of the runoff mechanisms in wet mountainous areas, our Male-naadu in particular. Investigations over the region by the author of this critique (Putty, 1994; Putty and Prasad, 2000), during a period of over two decades, have established that subsurface flow in the wetter parts of this land takes place through soil pipes, which form a very good means of draining the soil mantle quickly and keeping it stable. The Western Ghat areas are locally called Sahyadris, which interestingly mean “hills of tolerance”. These mountains have stood the odds of extreme rainfall mainly because of the presence of preferential subsurface pathways like pipes, which this author likens to Gupta Gaminies (Plate 4).

Unfortunately, the GSI and other teams seem to be ignorant of this very important “safety valve” of nature. This type of ignorance is the case even after the investigations on Pipeflow have been reported often (Putty, 2006, 2009) and the ‘National Centre for Earth Science Studies’, Thiruvananthapuram, has conducted a workshop on piping and has published reports on land subsidences in Kerala due to piping (Plate 5), the last year (Proceedings piping land disturbances 2017 (<https://sandrp.in/wp-content/uploads/2020/08/proceedings-piping-land-disturbances-2017.pdf>)).

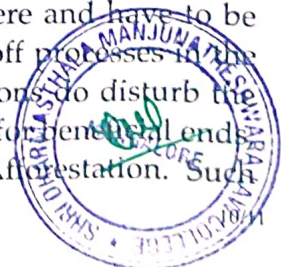

Plate 5- Photographs on piping and land subsidence due to roof collapse (from NCESS)

Nature and Man:

This write-up has been penned to emphasise on the fact that while human activities do have an impact on the natural processes, disasters cannot be prevented and that people cannot be held responsible for all sorts of disasters. Further, it is the intention of the author to highlight that the water-related issues in Male-naadu region are much different from those elsewhere and have to be viewed from angles different from the commonly known ones. Since surface runoff processes in the region are largely confined to the stream sides, human interference in these portions do disturb the natural processes greatly. Human interferences here not only mean those taken up for beneficial ends but also include the so-called Watershed development practices and forced Afforestation. Such activities block the subsurface flow paths, damage the pipes and bring subsurface water to the surface. They lead to accelerated erosion and widen stream channels. Hence, they need to be curbed. However, small scale use of land by local inhabitants, taken up to heck-out at least a simple living, cannot be pointed out to be the reason for disasters. While clear cutting of slopes with thick vegetation to pave way for large scale plantations, particularly for tea and rubber (and coffee with canopy cover of 'exotic species'), should be banned, unnecessary widening of roads and execution of new mega projects (like railways and river diversion schemes) should be done away with. But, human activities on smaller scales can only be modified, with proper guidelines, to avoid large scale impact on the natural system. Framing such guidelines calls for long and dedicated studies. In fact, studies on Hydrology and Pedology of the region have utmost been scanty. Hence, water and soil engineers should be encouraged to do extensive field research in the region.

It seems the only bright spot in the GSI report is that it mentions having selected a few landslides for detailed studies. This author hopes fervently that such studies will involve experts without preconceived ideas and will harness the local knowledge base.

Original Application No. 1073/2024

Sachin Madev Hegde and Anr.

Applicant(s)

Versus

State of Karnataka

Respondent

Date of hearing: 27.08.2024

CORAM: HON'BLE MR. JUSTICE PRAKASH SHRIVASTAVA, CHAIRPERSON
HON'BLE MR. JUSTICE ARUN KUMAR TYAGI, JUDICIAL MEMBER
HON'BLE DR. A. SENTHIL VEL, EXPERT MEMBER

ORDER

1. This original application has been registered on the basis of the letter petition sent by the law students of one of the Law School of Mangalore. In this letter petition, the complainants have raised the issue of escalating landslides in ecologically sensitive Western Ghats, especially in Karnataka. It is the allegation that such increased incidents of landslides are taking place on account of the irresponsible human activities such as vertical cutting of hill slopes and indiscriminate felling of trees.
2. Though the issue relating to Western Ghats has been raised but in the body of the complaint, Applicants have confined their grievance concerning Western Ghats located in Karnataka more particularly the Districts of Dakshina Kannada, Kodagu (Coorg), Udupi, Uttara Kannada and Chikkamagaluru. Applicants have alleged that the people are cutting hillocks unscientifically and in an unregulated manner for various commercial and agricultural purposes such as establishing resorts and erecting commercial building etc. The hillocks are also cut for constructing roads as a result of which hills lose their support from the side and bottom becoming prone to landslide during the monsoon season and that there is no monitoring mechanism or authority to regulate such activities. The Complainants have also alleged that such landslides result in loss of human life, loss of biodiversity, soil erosion and degradation and water resource impacts and climate change vulnerability.

3. The complainants have suggested/recommended following immediate action:

- *1. Ban on Earth Movers in Ecologically Sensitive Areas: Consider a directive to ban on the use of heavy earth-moving machinery in ecologically sensitive zones of the Western Ghats, similar to measures adopted in certain north-eastern states of India. This restriction would help minimize soil disturbance and mitigate landslide risks.
2. Stop work direction: Issue a direction to stop any ongoing work of hill-lock cutting and restrict any future work which alters the basic structure of the hill in the Western Ghats until proper guidelines and regulations are in place to protect the Western Ghats.
3. Direction for Scientific Study or Environmental Impact Assessment: Issue direction to obtain scientific study certificates or Environmental Impact Assessment reports prior to continuing any ongoing work and/or starting any new development project.
4. Directive for Stricter Regulations: Issue directives for stringent regulations on hill cutting, deforestation, and land use practices in ecologically sensitive zones like the Western Ghats, Enforce regular monitoring and impose severe penalties for violations.
5. Promotion of Sustainable Development Practices: Encourage the adoption of sustainable development practices that prioritize environmental conservation and biodiversity protection. This includes promoting eco-friendly infrastructure development and implementing reforestation initiatives.
6. Public Awareness and Education: Launch comprehensive awareness campaigns to educate local communities, policymakers, and stakeholders about the environmental impacts of their actions and the importance of preserving natural ecosystems.
7. Investment in Research and Monitoring: Allocate resources for research and monitoring programs aimed at understanding landslide dynamics, ecosystem resilience, and climate change impacts in the Western Ghats."

4. The OA raises substantial issue relating to compliance of environmental norms.

5. Hence, we implead the following as respondents in this matter:

1. Karnataka State Pollution Control Board through its Member Secretary.
2. Chief Secretary, State of Karnataka.
3. RO, MoEF&CC, Bangalore.
4. Principal Chief Conservator of Forest, Karnataka.

6. Issue notice to the above respondents for filing their response by way of affidavit before the Southern Zonal Bench of the Tribunal. If any respondent directly files the reply without routing it through his advocate, then the said respondent will remain virtually present to assist the Tribunal.

7. Since the subject matter of OA falls within the territorial jurisdiction of the Southern Zonal Bench, therefore, the OA is transferred to the Southern Zonal Bench, Chennai for appropriate further action. Let the original record of the OA be transferred to Southern Zonal Bench, Chennai.

8. List before the Southern Zonal Bench at Chennai on 18.10.2024.

The Expert Committee discussed all the issues and difficulties involved and resolved the following.

1. Based on the analysis of the data received from the Colleges and Students it was resolved that the students from Rural Colleges are not able to attend online mode of examination due to problem of electricity and other technical issues like internet, Battery Backups etc., If examinations are held online it will cause injustice to those students.
2. Since the Government of Karnataka has also issued the Order for reopening of Schools and Colleges by following Covid-19 guidelines. Therefore it was resolved that offline mode of conduct of examination is better.

Issued under RTI Act

3. As per the Government Order students from other States who cannot travel, an opportunity may be given to them to appear for next examination as fresh candidate. No Examination fee shall be collected for the next examination if already fees had been paid.
4. Hence, considering the above reason coming examinations shall be conducted offline mode only.

REPORT ON
PARTICIPATION IN LOK ADALATH AND ACTIVITIES
UNDERTAKEN BY SDM LAW COLLEGE IN ASSOCIATION WITH DISTRICT LEGAL SERVICES AUTHORITY, MANGALURU, DAKSHINA KANNADA

Students of our college are made to participate in Lok Adalats organised by District Legal Services Authority every year to get acquainted with the Alternate Dispute Resolution Mechanisms.

Lok Adalath (Janatha Nyalaya) will be held as per the directions of Supreme Court and National Legal Services Authority. Objective behind conducting Lok Adalt is to settle the disputes pending before the courts through amicable settlement. Parties can settle their disputes amicably instead of litigation by resorting to this Alternate Dispute Resolution Mechanism such as Conciliation.

The students of Law colleges will be participating in such Conciliation proceedings with an intention of making them to be acquainted with the ADR techniques. Accordingly our students have been allowed to take part in such proceedings every year whenever Lok Adalat takes place.
